Performance Technologies Reports Continued Revenue and Profit Growth in the Third Quarter Page 2

Early in 2003, a corporate-wide effort was launched to reposition the Company to deliver fully managed, system-level platform solutions. This effort achieved an important milestone during the third quarter with the release of the IPnexus™ Advanced Managed Platform product line. This new line of platform solutions specifically addresses equipment manufacturers' requirements for an increased level of system integration and services from suppliers. This growing opportunity for the Company is the result of downsized engineering staffs and increased time-to-market pressures placed on equipment manufacturers. The Company's strategy addresses this trend by effectively enabling customers to replace proprietary or legacy platforms with the latest generation of fully managed system functionality.

"The Company has made significant progress in establishing itself as a comprehensive system-level platform and solutions supplier over the past twelve months as is evidenced by the recent design win announcements with Sun Microsystems and Stratus Technologies, both expected to be multi-million dollar revenue customers during 2004," said Donald Turrell, president and chief executive officer. "However, due to our customers' normal product cycles, none of the design wins associated with the Company's system-level solutions have yet to reach production. The potential revenue and earnings growth driven by this strategy is expected to be realized in 2004 and beyond. Thus far this year, management is pleased with the Company's positive revenue and profit growth; all of which is occurring in an environment where our customers' revenues have not yet begun to grow. We are also pleased with the significant upturn in the design activity the Company is experiencing as we penetrate the market with our expanded product and platform offering."

Guidance

The Company's products are integrated into current and next-generation embedded systems infrastructure. Traditionally, design wins have been an important metric for management to judge the Company's product acceptance in its marketplace. Design wins reach production volumes at varying rates, generally beginning twelve to eighteen months after the design win occurs. A variety of risks such as schedule delays, cancellations, changes in customer markets and economic conditions can adversely affect a design win before production is reached, or during deployment. In addition, during difficult economic periods, a substantial portion of the Company's revenue is frequently derived from orders placed within the quarter and shipped in the final month of the quarter.

Edgar Filing: PERFORMANCE TECHNOLOGIES INC \DE\ - Form 8-K

In the Company's target markets, capital spending appeared to stabilize during the fourth quarter 2002, however, very few companies in the Company's target markets are currently experiencing revenue growth. Starting in 2003, certain of the Company's customers began moving projects toward production and since mid-year, the Company's sales organization has seen a broad acceleration in design activity. During the third quarter 2003, the Company realized six design wins for its IPnexus and SEGway™ product families. Unfortunately, forward-looking visibility on customer orders continues to be very limited.

Based upon the current business mix, the current backlog and review of sales forecasts, management expects revenue to be $12.0 million to $13.0 million in the fourth quarter 2003. Gross margin is expected to be approximately 50.5% to 52.5%, reflecting continuing sequential improvement, and diluted per share earnings for the fourth quarter is expected to be between $.05 and $.08. The effective income tax rate for the fourth quarter is assumed to be 31%. The fourth quarter revenue guidance does not reflect orders from a customer that has contributed greater than 10% of the Company's revenue in each of the first three quarters of this year. This customer typically provides very little visibility on future orders but ordinarily would have placed orders for the fourth quarter by this time. Should this customer place orders, of the usual magnitude, for delivery in the fourth quarter, management would expect the Company to exceed this revenue and earnings guidance by a material amount.

More in-depth discussions of the Company's strategy and financial performance can be found in the Company's recent Annual and Quarterly Reports, on Form 10-K and Form 10-Q, as filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.
