Orthofix Expresses Concern that
Ramius Communications to Shareholders
Contain Egregious Errors

Activist Hedge Fund Has Made Multiple False Statements That Are Misleading To Orthofix Shareholders

BOSTON, Mar 19, 2009 – Orthofix International N.V. (NASDAQ: OFIX) (the Company) today criticized activist hedge fund Ramius for including false and misleading statements in recent communications to Orthofix shareholders in their ongoing proxy contest. For example, in an investor presentation filed with the SEC on March 12 and shared with proxy advisory firm RiskMetrics Group the same day, Ramius included blatantly false statements about Orthofix Chairman James F. Gero and fellow Board member Thomas J. Kester. Orthofix believes that these false statements were made in reckless disregard of the facts, which are easily obtainable through public sources, and stand in stark contrast to Ramius’ stated belief in good corporate governance and shareholder advocacy.

“Orthofix has continued to try to cooperate with Ramius throughout this proxy contest despite the inflammatory nature of some of their rhetoric, and has endeavored to make sure that shareholders receive an accurate view of the facts and the opinions from both sides,” said Alan Milinazzo, Orthofix CEO. “However, certain statements that Ramius has included in recent SEC filings and press releases are blatantly false and misleading and Orthofix shareholders should understand the facts.”

The following four statements that Ramius has recently made are demonstrably false and misleading to shareholders:

1. False Statement about James F. Gero, Orthofix Chairman

In its presentation to RiskMetrics Group, filed as definitive additional soliciting material with the SEC on March 12, 2009, Ramius falsely states that James F. Gero is “Chairman of Clearwire, Inc. – [whose] stock price has declined 88% since the IPO.” In fact, Mr. Gero was not chairman, a board member nor a member of management of this company at the time of its IPO in 2007, and has not been at any time since. Ramius’ statement falsely links Mr. Gero with the sharp price decline of this company in a manner that disparages his professional reputation and is misleading to shareholders. Ramius could have easily confirmed this fact as neither Clearwire’s IPO prospectus nor any of its public filings since the IPO mention Mr. Gero having any role at the company.

2. False Statement about Thomas J. Kester, Orthofix Board Member

In the same filing noted above, after referencing his experience as a KPMG audit partner, Ramius falsely states that Orthofix Board Member Thomas J. Kester “has no other public or private board experience.” In fact, Mr. Kester currently serves as a director, and until recently has been chairman of the board, of a non-profit organization with a multi-million dollar annual budget, and another affiliated non-profit corporation. Once again, Ramius’ statement was false and gives Orthofix shareholders a false and misleading description of Mr. Kester’s professional background and experience.

3. False Statement about Orthofix Corporate Office and Boston Real Estate

Again in the same filing, Ramius criticizes Orthofix for the choice of its Boston office location, calling it “arguably some of the most expensive real estate in Boston.” In fact, the Orthofix office lease in Boston is $27 per square foot, approximately 50% of the average cost of comparable nearby real estate according to Cushman & Wakefield. Making this sort of objectively false statement again calls attention to Ramius’ reckless behavior in this proxy contest.

4. False Statement about Orthofix Regarding the Special Meeting of Shareholders

Ramius’ March 9, 2009 letter to Orthofix shareholders and accompanying press release, also filed with the SEC, accused the Orthofix Board of delaying the scheduling of the Special Meeting of shareholders, stating: “The current Board scheduled the Special Meeting on a date that is as far out as possible under Netherlands Antilles law...” In fact, no provision of Netherlands Antilles law or the Company’s articles of association mandates a maximum time period or number of days by which a special meeting must be held. By saying “as far out as possible under Netherlands Antilles law,” Ramius is misleading shareholders to believe that the Board scheduled the meeting as late as possible under the law, when in fact the exact opposite is true. The Company scheduled the special meeting as soon as practical, given the SEC’s rules, in an effort to deal fairly and honestly with shareholders and move beyond this distracting and costly contest as soon as possible. Ramius’ statement misleads shareholders and hides the fact that Ramius initiated this wasteful Special Meeting process when its proposals could have been considered at the Annual Meeting 1-2 months later with significantly less cost to Orthofix shareholders.

Since the beginning of this contest, the Board and management of Orthofix have committed to communicating with shareholders frequently to illustrate clear, factual reasons why we believe shareholders should question whether Ramius’ proposals would bring value to the Company. In return, Ramius has responded with inflammatory and misleading statements that blatantly disregard the facts of the situation – facts that could be easily obtained through public sources of information. In today’s challenging business environment, Orthofix shareholders deserve sound, steady judgment, and shareholders should question Ramius’ ability to bring value to the Company given its inability (or unwillingness) to successfully undertake even rudimentary fact-checking.
