UNILEVER STREAMLINES ITS LEADERSHIP STRUCTURE

- Dual Chairman/CEO structure to be abandoned
- Antony Burgmans will become non-executive Chairman of N.V. and PLC
- Patrick Cescau will become Group Chief Executive
- New Executive Team, chaired by Group Chief Executive, replaces
- Executive Committee and Divisions
- Executive Directors to be reduced from seven to four
- Implementation to begin immediately and new organisation effective from April 2005
- Review of Corporate Structure to be led by the Chairman

Unilever today announces a series of significant changes to streamline its management and leadership. The changes see the creation of the positions of a new single non-executive Chairman and a new Group Chief Executive.

Antony Burgmans, currently Chairman of Unilever N.V., will become non-executive Chairman of both Unilever N.V. and Unilever PLC responsible for managing the Boards. It is expected that this position will be filled in the course of 2007 by an independent non-executive director.

Patrick Cescau, currently Chairman of Unilever PLC, will take on the role of Group Chief Executive responsible for all operations.

Bertrand Collomb, currently Senior Independent Director, will in addition assume the role of non-executive Vice-Chairman of both Unilever N.V. and Unilever PLC.

The streamlining of the business sees three directors step down from the Boards and one new appointment reducing the number of executive members from seven to four.

The current Executive Committee, the Foods and Home and Personal Care (HPC) divisions, and the 11 business groups will be eliminated. Full executive authority will be devolved to the Group CEO and his new operating team. This will consist of three Regional Presidents (Europe, Americas, Asia/Africa), two Category Presidents of Foods and HPC, the Chief Financial Officer, and the Chief Human Resources Officer.

A team is ready to implement the changes and the business will be operated along the new lines from April 2005.

Additionally a review of the Group structure will be undertaken, led by the Chairman, reporting to the 2006 AGMs.

Antony Burgmans said: "Today is a hugely important day in the long and distinguished history of our company. We have recognised the need for greater clarity of leadership and we are moving to a simpler leadership structure that will provide a sharper operational focus. We are leaving behind one of the key features of Unilever's governance but this is a natural development following the changes introduced last year.

"The decisions announced today provide the right platform for Unilever to focus on the needs of our customers and consumers and to re-ignite growth.

"With regard to the review of our corporate structure, our current arrangements have served us well. Nevertheless, it is now appropriate to review whether they will continue to do so into the future.

"I would like to pay tribute to three of my colleagues who will be retiring from the Boards. Andre van Heemstra, Keki Dadiseth and Clive Butler have all had long and distinguished careers with Unilever, and we thank them all for their contributions."

Patrick Cescau said; "I am excited to have been entrusted with this new challenge.

"These changes are designed to make us more competitive in the marketplace. The fusion of our businesses under the leadership of three Regional Presidents gives us the ability to truly leverage our scale and to service our customers more effectively. The two Category Presidents will concentrate on brand management and activation driven always by consumer needs and aspirations.

"The de-layering of the top management brings simplicity, clarity of leadership and greater accountability. And now we have the right people in the right roles focusing on the right issues.

"We are all determined to return Unilever to the kind of performance the shareholders expect."

The formal creation of the Chairman and Group Chief Executive roles will be presented to shareholders for adoption at the Annual General Meetings in May when, in addition, Ralph Kugler will be nominated for election as a Director of the Boards of Unilever.
