A MESSAGE FROM FRED

April 24, 2008

Dear colleagues:

Since the beginning of the year, beyond operating our business, we've been working closely with Ingersoll Rand to complete the acquisition and create a business and corporate organization for the combined company. Today I'm writing to share information about Trane organizational changes that will take place upon completion of the acquisition, which we expect in the second quarter. Ingersoll Rand CEO Herb Henkel also has written a letter, which is attached, that outlines the planned new Ingersoll Rand organization.

Trane business leadership

As you know, our Trane businesses are led by Craig Kissel and Dave Pannier. Craig, president of Trane Commercial Systems, has decided to retire after more than 25 years filled with accomplishment and contribution. Craig wants to lead an independent company and intends to pursue a CEO opportunity after he leaves. To ensure a smooth transition, Craig will stay on for three months after the acquisition takes place. You can read about Craig's successor, Mike Lamach, in Herb's letter.

Dave will remain as president of Residential Systems in the new Ingersoll Rand. Dave has done a terrific job for our company, and I'm confident he'll do a terrific job for Ingersoll Rand. As you'll see in the attached letter, Dave will report to Herb.

Trane corporate leadership

Today, in addition to Craig and Dave, we have six senior corporate leaders including me.

They are Larry Costello, senior vice president of Human Resources; Peter D'Alloia, senior vice president and chief financial officer; Mary Beth Gustafsson, senior vice president, general counsel and corporate secretary; Shelly London, vice president and chief communications officer; and Sally Robling, vice president and chief marketing officer. All of us, except for Mary Beth, expect to leave the company once the acquisition is complete. Mary Beth will take an important leadership role in the Ingersoll Rand legal organization. Herb's letter explains more about her role.

No changes for the vast majority of people

The vast majority of Trane's 29,000 employees work in RS and TCS. As we've said from the beginning, nearly all of them will continue in their current roles. We also have about 170 people who work in Trane corporate roles and about 180 people who work in Trane Business Services.

Many of the people on our corporate and Business Services teams will have jobs in the combined company. Unfortunately, not everyone will have a job. That's not a reflection on their performance in any way. As Ingersoll Rand looked to create a new corporate organization of Trane and Ingersoll Rand people, there simply weren't enough openings for everyone currently employed at Trane or Ingersoll Rand. All Trane employees who lose jobs will get the best support we can provide in helping them find good new jobs elsewhere.

As the details of the combined company start to come into focus, I believe it's important to remember why we agreed to this acquisition in the first place. The combination of Trane with Ingersoll Rand will unite two successful global companies with complementary strengths in climate control and air conditioning systems and services. Together, Ingersoll Rand and Trane will create a bigger, stronger company able to do more for employees, shareowners and customers than either company could on its own.

It's too early to be saying goodbye to anyone, so I'm saving my thank-yous for later. But I can't resist thanking everyone now for remaining focused on the business, dealing so well with the challenges of the transition period and making a positive impact on our company.

Thanks,

Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer

Subject: Trane Acquisition Update and Organizational Announcements

As you know, people from both of our companies continue to work hard to bring our organizations together once we receive all the necessary approvals. I wanted to give you an update on the status of those approvals as well as decisions we have made regarding the prospective leadership of our combined organization.

As you may recall, two important prerequisites for completing the acquisition involved regulatory approval and Trane shareholder approval. I remain confident that we are on course to accomplish both critical milestones within our expected timeline, and I am optimistic that we will be able to complete the acquisition on or about May 30, 2008.

First, in February the United States Federal Trade Commission provided clearance to proceed with the transaction. In early April, we received similar approval from the European Commission. We now have received all required antitrust approvals necessary to complete the transaction.

Also, as a first step in the effort to receive approval by Trane's shareholders, we have submitted a document to the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) called a Form S-4. Among other information, this document provides details regarding the Ingersoll Rand shares to be issued to Trane shareholders as part of the acquisition. Once the Form S-4 is complete and declared effective we can establish the date for the vote by Trane's shareholders and we can mail the related proxy statement/prospectus. Twenty business days later there will be a shareholder meeting to approve the transaction.

While we have been engaged in the process to obtain regulatory and shareholder approvals, we also have been diligently proceeding with our integration planning activities across all of our Corporate and Enterprise Services (Business Services) functions. In addition, we have been exploring business opportunities that will result from our combined product, systems and services portfolio. Our integration teams have identified significant areas of cost savings, synergies, best practices and customer benefits that will enable us to rapidly deliver the results we expect for our combined organization. At the same time, the teams have created new organizational designs for each functional area comprising people from both companies across leadership, managerial and staff roles.

Organization Update

Now that we have made substantial progress on both the approval process and integration activities related to the acquisition, I would like to share with you decisions we have made regarding the team that will lead our combined organization when the transaction is completed. As envisioned, the new Ingersoll Rand leadership team will include a number of Trane executives who will assume roles critical to the company's financial and operational success. Certainly, many more decisions will need to be made, and we will communicate these when appropriate. Also, it is important to note that these organizational decisions are subject to, and will not take effect until after, the completion of the acquisition.

Business Unit/Sector Leadership

I believe the leadership team for our businesses represents a substantial advantage for Ingersoll Rand as we seek to expand participation and generate growth in all of our markets. Each of our business leaders possesses superior market expertise, operational proficiency, leadership excellence and demonstrated success throughout their careers.

Residential Systems

Dave Pannier will continue to lead as president, Residential Systems. Dave joined Trane 30 years ago and has been a tremendous leader for both Trane employees and customers. I am pleased to know that he will continue to apply his solid experience and superior industry knowledge to lead Residential Systems as we seek to build upon the business' market leadership and premium position in the residential space.

Trane Commercial Systems

Craig Kissel, president, Trane Commercial Systems has announced his plans to retire after more than 25 years of service with Trane and businesses within its predecessor organization, American Standard Companies. I am pleased that Craig has agreed to remain with Ingersoll Rand for three months following the completion of the Trane acquisition in order to provide a smooth leadership transition.

Mike Lamach, currently president, Ingersoll Rand Security Technologies Sector, will become president, Trane Commercial Systems, succeeding Craig Kissel. Mike joined Ingersoll Rand in 2004 after nearly 17 years with Johnson Controls Incorporated (JCI), where he led JCI's European/Asia Automotive Group business and its Controls Group. Since joining Ingersoll Rand, Mike has successfully guided the Security Technologies business to strong revenue and earnings performance, including through the past two years of difficult conditions in the residential market. In addition, Mike has extensive knowledge of the building controls and HVAC services businesses, which are integral to our growth strategy for Trane Commercial Systems. We expect to name Mike's successor as president, Security Technologies, before the completion of the Trane acquisition.

Jim Bolch, president, Ingersoll Rand Industrial Technologies Sector, and Steve Shawley, president, Ingersoll Rand Climate Control Sector, will continue to lead their respective businesses.

Enterprise Staff/Functional Leadership
