[The following is the text of an e-mail sent to employees of NetLogic Microsystems, Inc. from Ron Jankov, President and CEO, on Monday, June 01, 2009.]

Good morning NetLogic!

Today is a very exciting day for our company and all of us as employees. Today we announced the acquisition of RMI, the technology leader in multi-core, multi-threaded processors for networking, communications, data-center, storage and security. The NetLogic/RMI combination is very synergistic in numerous ways and will lead to a much stronger combined company than either company could have achieved separately. Most important, RMI has a corporate culture very similar to us here at NetLogic; specifically a focus on innovation and differentiation in architecture and design, a dedication to execution excellence and a total commitment to customer support and service. I think that you will find that the DNA of our two companies is virtually identical.

What this does for NetLogic is two things. First, this immediately gives us scale to better compete in the semiconductor market going forward; the combination of NetLogic + IDTI NSE business + RMI is approximately double the size of the current NetLogic. Second, this acquisition dramatically increases our Total Available Market (TAM) from approximately $350-$400M currently to $2.5B overnight. Over time, the Total Servable Market (SAM) for RMI products can reach $6B. Clearly this expansion of our TAM & SAM is a very favorable development for all of us.

I encourage you to read both of the attachments to this message; the press release as well as the script from our conference call this morning to give you more color and detail on this transaction.

Also, we will have an employee meeting . . . at 4pm. Please gather in the lobby as usual.

See you then,

Ron
