James Sandgren, Old National Bancorp EVP and Chief Banking Officer:

We're also excited and actively planning the closing and integration process with our pending United partnership in Ann Arbor, Michigan. Just last Friday, United reported a strong 1st quarter as well, with growth in both loans and deposits. The team there is fully engaged and completely intact and ready to hit the ground running. We anticipate the closing to be early in the 3rd quarter of 2014

(Q Scott Siefers, Sandler O Neill):

Given the volume of transactions it's always a little tough to figure out exactly what's going on, kind of on an apples-to-apples basis. It doesn't sound like there's any concern about the efficiency ratio target by the 4th quarter of this year. Just curious, as you see it, Bob, will hitting that target be more revenue driven, or will it be cost saving driven, given that you've got the two deals—one that just closed and then the next one a little later on in the year—how do you see things panning out from a cost/efficiency standpoint?

Great question, Scott. I would tell you that as we talked to our Board, it's all about expenses. I think you've heard my stupid saying that revenue growth is called "if-come." If it comes, it's great, and if it doesn't come, I'm not going to bank on it. So, we really are focused on reducing that cost basis to get to the 64.5% and beyond. Any growth that we get in revenue will be great, but we've asked Mark Gorski to take a strong leadership role—many of you may remember Mark from his days at IBT as CFO—he's been a great addition to Chris' team and he really is knee deep in working with Jim and others and Chris to make sure that it's all about expenses. It runs the gamut, you know—it's looking at things like imaging and how we move paper, how do we do a better job in the back room. Part of the reorganization we just announced with the multitude of changes, most particularly with Julie Williams, it's really about starting with a blank sheet of paper and redesigning our operations so that we can be much more efficient in serving the client and saving money. So, it's all about reducing costs.

(Q Stephen Geyen, D.A. Davidson & Co.):

Okay. Last question; you gave some comments or color on the expected one-time costs for the Tower and UBMI acquisition in 2Q with $6 to $8 million. Do you expect all the Tower expenses to be completed by the end of the second quarter? And do you expect all the UBMI one-time costs to be done by the end of the year?

(A Bob Jones, Old National Bancorp President and CEO):

Yes to both

(Q Jon Arfstrom, RBC Capital Markets):

Okay, good. Then just maybe your comments on the reduction in overdraft presentments and maybe changing consumer behavior. I guess tie that into maybe the Durbin mitigation and with your two deals closing give us an update on your thinking in terms of how to offset some of that blow? Or is this just something you accept and move forward?

(A Bob Jones Old National Bancorp President & CEO):

Well, I think we accept the history and move forward. I think with our acquisition, our partnership in Fort Wayne and UBMI, and as I said the pipeline is there for Jim to do others, we clearly know we've got to grow above that purgatory base that we are in now with slightly over 10% just to cover it.

Now I've spent some time in Washington. It is our hope that at some stage in the future that line moves; maybe to $50 billion, but we're not counting on it. I think, Jon, all we know is we've got to continue to drive costs down, drive revenue up to cover the inherent effects of Durbin.

Hopefully, we can land another couple of deals that will more than cover it, but it is there and we are painfully aware of it. But I'm confident that we can get through it by the time we are assessed

(Q Taylor Brodarick, Guggenheim Securities):

Okay, great. And, Chris, I'm sorry, just to make sure I've got this right. On the nonrecurring stuff for 2Q and 3Q, because I had had I think like 11.5 for Tower. So you take out the 2.5 one more time for 2Q and 3Q, what are we looking at for the one-times?

(A Chris Wolking, Old National Bancorp Senior EVP and CFO):

For one-times, our total was 6 to 8, our expectation for the remainder of the year. Probably for second quarter largely most of that will be Tower and I don't have the breakdown before me, but .

It's actually 2 we expect somewhere around 2 for Tower in the second quarter, the balance of that UBMI. Tower then would be pretty much done with one-times and anything else would be UBMI related
