If so: attach an explanation of the anticipated change, both narratively and quantitatively, and, if appropriate, state the reasons why a reasonable estimate of the results cannot be made.

In the course of preparing its year end financial statements, the Company discovered a systematic error in the calculations of a portion of its non-cash depreciation, depletion and amortization ("DD&A") expense. The Company plans to file a restatement of its DD&A expense for the fiscal years ended December 31, 2001 and 2002 as well as the first three quarters of 2003, which will be incorporated in its 2003 Form 10-K annual report.

This calculation error has no effect on or change in the Company's current or previously reported oil and gas reserves. DD&A is a non-cash expense on the Company's income statement, and the restatement and increase in DD&A expense will have no effect on the Company's working capital, cash flow from operations or operating activities.
