We can compete against anybody.

Bill Harrison and Jamie Dimon appeared on MSNBC's Squawk Box to talk about the strengths of a new JPMorgan Chase. The interview was broadcast live from the 8th-floor trading room at 270 Park Avenue the morning after the merger was announced.

[Pages 2&3]

One of the great franchises

JPMorgan Chase's merger with Bank One will create one of the great franchises in our industry, Bill Harrison told employees in an e-mail on January 14.

The strategic rationale for the merger is compelling, Harrison said, pointing out the strengths of the combined entity:

- a client base of tremendous scope and diversity;
- leadership positions in each of its core businesses;
- huge scale advantages;
- greater stability and consistency of earnings; and
- greater capacity to invest for the future.

From individual consumers to the largest global institutions, the combined firm will be a leading provider of financial services with all the elements to deliver superior shareholder value.

Harrison said he and Bank One CEO Jamie Dimon are committed to continuing to build a culture based on individual leadership, where everyone can make an impact.

Having a very strong culture that will evolve out of this combination, he said, is absolutely critical, because people want to work for a company that's got the kind of culture they like. That's what enables you to attract great people.

Added Dimon, Together, we have a strong management team that can compete with the best. Our combined company will have the size, scale, product mix, customer base, distribution channels and earnings stability to achieve outstanding results and enhanced shareholder value for many years to come.

We're going to have some fabulous opportunities here, Dimon said. This should be a really special company, and I look forward to working with you all.

Jamie and I are very complementary, so I think our partnership will be very good from all perspectives.
