Cinergy Merger: May 27 Q&A for Duke Energy Employees

Why are we calling this a merger? Isn't it an acquisition?

A merger reflects a combining of companies. It can be accomplished a number of ways, including an acquisition. This transaction offers the combined company many benefits, including strengthening the scale and scope of unregulated operations and enhancing overall portfolio flexibility. Both companies share similar values and, once the transaction is completed, Cinergy's CEO will become Duke Energy's CEO. Technically, either term could be used. The word merger speaks to the spirit of this transaction.

News reports have indicated that we're acquiring Cinergy for $9 billion in stock. What does that number represent?

$9 billion represents the market value of Cinergy's outstanding shares (as of the close of market on Friday, May 6) plus the 13.4 percent premium we will pay.

We say the transaction is valued at approximately $13 billion. What does that mean?

That is a broader measure of the value of Cinergy. The $13 billion represents the market value of Cinergy's outstanding shares, plus the premium paid by Duke, added to the amount of net debt held by Cinergy. When combined, all three of these components yield an approximate value of Cinergy's long-term assets.

The approval process requires approval from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. Since Cinergy has no nuclear facilities, why is the NRC part of the approval process?

Though Cinergy does not have nuclear facilities, the merged company would through Duke Power. The NRC will want to be assured of continuing financial qualifications and operational standards of the merged company. After the merger, the strength of Duke's nuclear operations will not change. We would hope for timely approval by the NRC.

Assuming that PUHCA* is not repealed, how will the new company meet the requirements of the act?

Edgar Filing: Duke Energy Holding Corp. - Form 425

The Public Utility Holding Company Act (PUHCA) prohibits ownership of certain non-energy related businesses, so if that act is not repealed, we would likely be required to divest Crescent Resources, our affiliated real estate business. If that occurs, we expect the divestiture to be accomplished in an orderly process over three to five years. Given the possibility that PUHCA could be changed or repealed during that period, we have no firm conclusion about the disposition of Crescent.

Even under current PUHCA requirements, we expect to be able to retain all of the other non-utility businesses, including our international operations.

*Aug. 8 editor's note: The U.S. Energy Policy Act of 2005, signed into law by President Bush on Aug. 8, repeals PUHCA. The repeal will be effective Feb. 8, 2006.

When we say that Cinergy owns 7000 megawatts of regulated generation and 5000 megawatts of unregulated generation, is that fossil generation only?

Cinergy's generation makeup is as follows:

Regulated generation:

Coal 5,488 MW

Gas 1,263 MW

Oil 259 MW

Hydro 45 MW

Unregulated generation:

Coal 4,186 MW

Gas 736 MW

Oil 324 MW

One of the areas mentioned for workforce reductions is utility back-office operations. What exactly does that mean?

That typically refers to functions that support the company's processes of marketing and selling utility products and services. Examples include billing, collections and customer services. Please keep in mind that no decisions have been made about specific areas to be consolidated or employees who will be impacted by workforce reductions. Those decisions will be made during the transition period over the next several months.

What are next steps?

The near-term priority is the regulatory filings. During the months of June and July, filings will be made with the PUCs of five states, FERC, the SEC and other agencies. These filings will start the approval process that will ultimately determine the timing of the merger. Over the next few months, executives from both companies will solicit input on the integration process, which would begin in September. Additional details on the process, including timeline, will be communicated in August.

The merger is expected to close in mid-2006, at the earliest. So for the next year, it will be business as usual for most employees.
