Scor considers jury's verdict on the 9/11 attack on the WTC to be contrary to terms of insurance coverage in force and to the intent of the parties

On December 6, 2004, the New York jury in the trial regarding the insurance coverage of the World Trade Center rendered a verdict that the attack on the WTC on September 11, 2001 constituted two occurrences under the property insurance policies issued by Allianz Global Risks U.S. Insurance Company and the eight other insurers of the WTC that were parties to this trial.

SCOR, a reinsurer of Allianz, considers the jury's verdict to be contrary to the terms of the insurance coverage in force and to the intent of the parties. SCOR will fully support Allianz's efforts to overturn the verdict. A separate appraisal procedure is underway to determine the amount of the indemnification due from the insurers resulting from the destruction of the WTC. The amount of indemnification determined in that procedure could be substantially below two full occurrence limits and could be less than one full policy limit. SCOR is continuing to evaluate the potential additional indemnification, if any, that might result from that verdict.

Success of the Oceane 2004-2010 issue

SCOR successfully issued at the end of June 2004 bonds convertible and/or exchangeable into new or existing shares of SCOR ("OCEANE") due January 1, 2010 for an amount of EUR 200 million. SCOR took advantage of market opportunities at that time to proceed with this OCEANE issue in order to improve the structure of its existing indebtedness by extending its maturity, in particular by contributing in priority to the refinancing of its outstanding 1.00 % OCEANE convertible bonds due January 1, 2005.
