Verizon Acquisition of Vodafone's 45% Interest in Verizon Wireless

Verizon: Key Messages

How the transaction came together:

We have a moment in time where our interests aligned and we have a deal.

This transaction is a natural next step for our partnership with Vodafone.

The wireless, debt and equity markets all aligned and we have a deal that works for everyone.

This has been talked about for years, and that's because it makes sense on so many levels.

On Vodafone:

Today, you have two partners who are moving on with a great sense of pride in what they were able to achieve together.

We have worked side by side for over a decade and we have the greatest respect for the Vodafone team.

Transaction rationale:

Taking full ownership of our wireless business makes sense for our company, our shareholders and our customers.

Our partnership with Vodafone has been a great success and acquiring full ownership of our wireless business is the best way to take it forward.

Today with the convergence of technology across all of our networks and platforms, it's important for Verizon to own 100 percent of the wireless business.

With full ownership of our wireless business, we will be more efficient, agile, market responsive and lucrative, operating as a single company with integrated assets.

Customers are demanding ever greater connectivity on the move and we will have the operational flexibility we need to deliver it.

The digital economy is moving to mobile first on everything, which means there are many opportunities to pursue in mCommerce, mobile video and advertising and the cloud.

These opportunities require more than just wireless assets, which puts big Verizon in a better position than a pure mobile network operator.

The transaction is designed to be self-funding the incremental free cash flow we will acquire exceeds incremental after-tax interest expense and dividends.

We're committed to retaining our investment grade profile, investing in the business for growth and innovation and returning value to our shareholders.

Key Messages

Transaction provides Verizon with 100 percent ownership of Verizon Wireless and supports our corporate strategy

The digital economy is moving to mobile first on everything, and it's important for Verizon to own 100 percent of the wireless business. We will be more efficient, agile, market responsive and lucrative, operating as a single company with integrated assets.

Over the past 13 years, Verizon Wireless has been a key driver of our business strategy and has made Verizon Wireless into the premier mobile provider in the U.S. Over that period we have consistently expressed our desire to own the entire asset.

Our focus on customers, network reliability, and new technology have been the ingredients of a successful partnership with Vodafone.

With full ownership of our wireless business, we will open an exciting new chapter of our future as a new Verizon.

This milestone is important to Verizon's continued commitment to build long-term growth and shareholder value

The capabilities to wirelessly stream video and broadband in 4G LTE complement our other assets in fiber, global IP and cloud. These assets position us for the rapidly increasing customer demand for video, machine to machine and big data. We are confident of further growth in wireless, and our business in its entirety.

Our continued investment in the business and technology leadership will allow us to continue growing Verizon Wireless.

These opportunities require more than just wireless assets, which puts Verizon in a better position than a pure mobile network operator.

The full ownership of our wireless network enhances our flexibility to adapt and innovate and continue to create value for shareholders.

Customers will get more of what they love reliability, value and innovation with even more seamless integration in the future.

Verizon already has full operational control of the joint venture, but with full ownership, we will now be a more nimble operating entity for the benefit of our customers.

Transaction will enhance value across all networks and platforms by allowing us to operate the business more efficiently. It will also increase our opportunities to produce seamless and integrated products and solutions for our customers.

We will continue to deliver an outstanding customer experience in terms of network reliability and quality.

We believe this transaction will strengthen the customer experience with the further integration of customer services across platforms, including enhanced video, cloud and security.
